U. S. SUBMARINE WITH 26 MEN SUNK

Missing in Honolulu Harbor Since Thursday Morning.

WAS AT TARGET PRACTICE

Oil Floating on Surface Indicates the Vessel Has Met Disaster--Fear She Is Caught In Deep Sea Crevise.

Vessels outside the harbor of Honolulu, Hawaii, reported that the submarine F-4, which has been missing since Thursday morning, had been found by grapplers and was being towed to shallow water by the naval tug Navajo and the steamship Makala.

The cables of the grapplers, it was said, were fast to a heavy mass, that steadily was being drawn shoreward. Oil was coming to the surface in quantities.

Fresh hope was given the searchers for the missing submarine F-4, which was submerged on Thursday morning and has not reappeared, when army engineers suggested a search in a new spot, definitely located.

Diving bells and other equipment have been sent to this spot. On board the submarine are Lieutenant Alfred L. Ede and twenty-five men.

James M. Hoggett, electrician, of Macedonia, Mo., who was on shore leave, is the only member of the crew known to have escaped.

The little flotilla of submarines was engaged in target practice Thursday morning, when the F-4 dived. It was not regarded as unusual that she should remain under water for an hour or more in the course of the maneuvers, but when noon came and the vessel continued submerged anxiety began to be felt. This increased as the afternoon wore on, and the other submarines began a search for the F-4. The naval station was notified and other vessels were sent out to aid.

Late in the night it was reported that the F-4 had been located at a depth of 120 fathoms (720 feet), but this report proved incorrect. Efforts were made to communicate with the submerged vessel by signal bells, which have a wide range, but without success. This has given rise to the fear that the submarine's signal system has been destroyed or that death has overtaken the crew.

Rear Admiral Charles B. T. Moore, commandant of the Honolulu station, said the men on the F-4 would be in no danger of suffocation ordinarily for at least twenty-four hours, and that if the vessel's air apparatus remained in good order the crew might live a week submerged. He said, however, that the F-4 lacked food supplies.

Among the members of the crew are Gunner's Mate Horace Moore, of Philadelphia, and Gunner's Mate Archie H. Linger, of Erie, Pa.

SLAYERS INSULTED FLAG

U. S. Emblem Torn From House Destroyed by Mexicans.

Secretary of State Bryan has just revealed that in the original report of the murder of John B. McManus, an American citizen, in Mexico City, by Zapata troops, the Brazilian minister had notified the state department also that the American flag was torn from the house and partially destroyed.

The secretary said a request for reparation for the indignity to the flag was sent at the time, but he did not reveal what form the request had taken. He denied that there had been any request for a salute to the flag.

Secretary Bryan said that while regret had been expressed for the killing of McManus, he did not recall that any regret had been expressed for the flag incident.

Steel Manufacturer Whose Plants U. S. Will Probe.

An official inquiry is to be made to the various reports that the Bethlehem Steel company, headed by Charles M. Schwab, is making submarines for shipment abroad. It is understood that the rumors are not generally credited by the officials of the administration, as Mr. Schwab recently promised that submarines then under construction at this plant for the allies would not be delivered until after the close of the war, but as a matter of policy and to keep American neutrality above reproach, the inquiry is deemed advisable. It is said the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem company is shipping parts of the undersea fighters to Montreal, where they are put together and then started to England for service against the Germans. In his promise to the state department Mr. Schwab reserved the right to ship parts of submarines abroad, such as engines, batteries and accessories.

RUSSIANS ROUT AUSTRIANS

Win Decisive Victory Over Foe in the Carpathian Mountains.

A decisive victory has been won by the Russians in the great struggle along the Carpathian barriers, where the huge armies of the czar are trying to smash their way through the passes for the definite invasion of Hungary.

Private telegrams received from Bucharest, by way of Rome, announce that the Russians have won a great victory on the Austrian extreme right in Bukovina, and that with strong new forces they have driven the Austrians back in the Uzsok Pass of the Carpathians.

It is thought in London that the Russians by bringing up new forces may have succeeded in turning the Austrian right and in reaching the Sereth river, thus getting behind the Austrian army operating in the vicinity of Czernowitz.

The Russians also have resumed the offensive in the region of the Pilica river, southern Poland, and have, according to the Petrograd statement, taken an important German position, while in the north heavy fighting is again in progress along the East Prussian frontier, despite the condition of the ground.

TWO CHILDREN BURNED

Mother, Unable to Rescue Little Ones, Watches Flames Destroy Home.

Two children of Charles Peck, a farmer near Harrington, Del., were incinerated after they had been placed in bed by their mother for a nap.

They were Jessie, three months of age, and Waterman, two years old. It is supposed that woodwork in the room in which they slept caught fire from an overheated stove.

Mrs. Peck was downstairs and ignorant of the fire until a boy spied the flames and smoke from a road a quarter mile distant and apprised her of it.

Mrs. Peck, powerless to rescue her children, retreated to the yard, where she saw the home destroyed by fire and the bodies consumed. Mr. Peck, who recently moved to the farmstead, was in Harrington buying farming materials.

Saloonkeeper Gives Evangelist License as Souvenir.

PRAYS AND WINS CUSTOMERS

Plymouth Man Pours Out Stock, Saying Sale Would Involve Another In Disgusting Business.

After investing his savings in a saloon and engaging in the business for the last five years, Edmund Jones, of Plymouth, near Wilkes-Barre, Pa., hit the trail at the revival services of Dr. George Wood Anderson in Plymouth, and after the tabernacle services were concluded he went with the evangelist, his party and a crowd of trail hitters to the saloon for the purpose of destroying it.

Led by Jones, the party reached the saloon while a number of customers were taking their "nightcaps." Jones told the crowd what he had done, and declared that he intended to destroy every bit of liquor in his saloon.

The beer kegs were stove in and their contents dumped into the gutter. The whisky, wine, gin and other bottles were smashed and their contents spilled about.

Before the startled frequenters of the saloon could discover what it was all about, Jones suggested that a prayer meeting be held in the barroom. Prayers were offered and hymns sung, and while this service was on Jones took his license from the wall and gave it to Dr. Anderson as a souvenir of his victory over the saloon.

During the meeting Jones went among his former patrons as a personal worker and urged them to accept Christ. He talked with a few of his best customers, and before the meeting was over three came forward as penitents and professed religion.

From behind the bar where he had formerly served drinks Jones made a speech, in which he said:

"The saloon business is hell. For five years I have engaged in this business and I have never had much peace. I was lured into it by the hope of making money quickly, but I discovered it to be a disgusting business, the lowest business in the world. I could have sold out, but I would not want any decent man to go through with what I did for all the money in the world. I believe nine-tenths of the saloonkeepers look upon their business as the most degrading in which they could engage."

Workmen Excavating For Cellar Open Graves of Old Cemetery.

Twenty-seven human skeletons were found in an excavation for a cellar at 606 South Percy street, in Philadelphia.

For a time the police of the Third and Christian streets station thought they had unearthed a murder farm. Investigation brought to light indications that the excavation is over an old cemetery, probably used more than 100 years ago.

The first skull was brought up by a pick wielded by Salvatore Augustine. When he cleared away the dirt and saw he had a human skull he fled. Other workmen were less sensitive and they brought up twenty-seven skeletons. They were taken to the morgue.

CAPTURE 117,000 MEN AT PRZEMYSL

600 Modern Guns Also Taken by Russians.

SOME FORTS STILL INTACT

Nine Generals and Staffs and 2500 Other Officers Made Captives Opens Road to Czar.

The Russian war office in Petrograd has announced that 117,000 men were captured at Przemyśl. The war office statement follows:

"According to figures given by General Kusmanek, late commander at Przemyśl, the number of prisoners who surrendered to the Russians was nine generals and ninety-three officers of the general staff, 2500 officers and officials and 117,000 men.

"The number of guns and other war material captured are now being calculated."

The lack of official details from Przemyśl is said to be due to the heavy snowstorm, which broke down the telegraph lines.

It is reported, however, that nearly a quarter of the garrison had suffered from typhoid and scurvy. Although the rations were growing more and more limited, none but a few of the higher officers, up to the end of January, knew that actual starvation was impending.

The real condition of affairs was learned by the troops when an aviator, who was starting with message for Vienna, was shot down by the Russians and fell within the defenders' line. After that there was much grumbling in the garrison and almost a mutiny. Some of the Austrians slipped through the lines at night and surrendered to the Russians.

The investing Russian forces increased the intensity of their bombardment and the strain on the defenders began to tell more rapidly during February. Many were rendered insane by privations and disease. The death list was very high.

Civilian inhabitants, who had been unable to escape when the siege began, swarmed about the fort begging food and refuge, but the commandant was unable to care for them. The death of two prominent generals in February from typhoid fever tended to weaken the determination of General von Kusmanek, commander of the fortress.

By the end of February actual famine prevailed; scarcely a living animal was left. For weeks virtually the only sustenance was obtained from small supplies of concentrated food stuffs brought in by aeroplanes.

A council of officers daily considered the situation, but not until they were convinced that there was no hope of help from an Austrian relieving column did they reach the decision to surrender.

The Russian authorities have received information to the effect that the defenses of Przemyśl are in good condition, notwithstanding the long siege and are capable of being put into working order immediately. Six hundred guns of the newest type were found in the fortress.

Spurned, Man Shoots Woman.

Shot by a jealous suitor, Minnie wife of Harry Davidheiser, of Birdsboro, Pa., is in a critical condition in the Reading hospital, with four bullet wounds in her body.

Her assailant was Chester Green, twenty-three years old, of Birdsboro. His body was found hanging in a fire company building at Birdsboro. He had not been seen since the shooting.

Mrs. Davidheiser and her husband have been separated for about a year. With her small son the woman attended services at a Birdsboro church and was met outside by Green, who escorted her home.

The young woman, who is twenty years of age, insisted that their friend ship must cease, and said she intended to do what was right for the sake of her child. Then Green shot her.

Commander Bricker's home was at Chambersburg, Pa.

Billy Sunday Converts 45,000.

Like a dazzling comet, Billy Sunday passed out of the vision of Philadelphia, but not out of its heart and its mind, on Sunday night.

Billy Sunday waved farewell to Philadelphia from the observation platform of the flyer out of Broad street station. Fur-coat collar muffled about his ears, his gray slouch hat circled above his head, and his train thundered into the west--and darkness.

Thousands, waving hats and handkerchiefs; thousands with misty eyes, shouted him godspeed. There were tears in Billy's eyes as the train pulled out.

The train for the west, which took Sunday and Ma away left behind it a trail of trail hitters numbering more than 45,000.

In his wallet Billy carried a certified check for $51,136.85, as a practical testimonial of the appreciation in which the city's people hold the efforts which he had put forth for the cause of religion during the eleven weeks.

Oiled Pigs Catch Fire.

While William Archer, of near Cromwell, Ind., was endeavoring to exterminate lice on his pigs by using kerosene oil a lighted torch fell into the pan of oil.

There was a flash and the next instant a terrified, oil-soaked porker dashed for the open, a mass of fire. Soon a half dozen hogs were ablaze. All dashed out and circled the yard a couple of times and, returning to the pen, set it on fire.
